UM ALUMNI COLLEGE TO BE CONDUCTED
IN PACIFIC GROVE, CALIF., FEB. 22-24

MISSOULA--

Gene Marine, author of "America the Raped," will be the featured speaker at the University of Montana Alumni College, which travels to Pacific Grove, Calif., Feb. 22-24.

Dorothy Rochon Powers, editorial and feature writer for the Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash.; Don Oliver, news correspondent for NBC television news, and Robert Lazich, announcer for NBC radio news in San Francisco, will serve on a panel on changes in communication during the series of seminars entitled "Dimensions of Change." They will join George W. Oechsli, Alumni Director, Deanna Sheriff, Alumni College director and the Alumni College faculty in the program at Asilomar conference center.

Marine, former senior editor of Ramparts magazine, is also author of "Food Pollution," "The Black Panthers" and "A Male Guide to Women's Liberation."

All UM alumni, former students and their spouses are invited to attend the college, where a variety of recreational activities will be available, including golf, tennis, swimming, softball, volleyball, a cruise around Monterey Bay and shopping tours in nearby Carmel and Monterey.

University faculty who will lead discussions during the weekend are Mary Cummings, assistant professor of social work; Jon Driessen, assistant professor of sociology; Louis Hayes, chairman of the UM political science department; Harry Fritz, assistant professor of history; David Emmons, assistant professor of history, and Richard Adler, assistant professor of English.

UM ALUMNI COLLEGE--2

The cost of the college is $85 per person, which includes room, board and registration. Sheriff said a minimum of 60 people is required, but because of space limitations no more than 100 registrants will be accepted. "Interested alumni are encouraged to register as soon as possible," she said.

Persons interested in attending the alumni college may make reservations by writing the University of Montana Alumni Center, Missoula, Mont., 59801 and enclosing a $30 deposit for each registrant.
